INTRODUCTION

THE coins found in the excavations at Sardes during the seasons of 1910–14 are representative of nearly every century from the time of Croesus to the reign of the Emperor John V.[1] They fall into five groups, as follows:

Greek	419
Roman	214
Vandal	1
Byzantine	354
Latin East	2

a total of 990.

Of the Greek coins, 16 are from the pre-Alexandrian period, and are distributed as follows: GREEK: pre-Alexandrian.

TABLE I. ANALYSIS OF GREEK COINS OF THE PRE-ALEXANDRIAN PERIOD.

They are so few in number that it is impossible to draw any conclusions from them. It may be noted that the only bronze coins are from Colophon, a city which, with Ephesus, probably furnished the inhabitants of Sardes with small currency during the Persian occupation. Of these ten coins, however, five were found in one tomb, and four in the Basis; they do not therefore furnish sufficient evidence to settle this question.

For the period from Alexander the Great to Augustus there are 319 coins, of which 183 were found in two hoards, and require separate consideration. Alexander–Augustus.

In Table II is given an analysis of the places of issue of, or the rulers responsible for, all the coins of this period, whether found in tombs, or singly in the main excavations. The districts of origin best represented are Macedon, Thrace, Mysia, Ionia, Lydia, and the Seleucid mints. In these were struck 129 out of a total of 134 coins. The Thracian and Syrian, and probably also the Royal Pergamenian issues, are confined to the periods when kings of those countries included Sardes in their dominions. After the end of the Attalid dynasty, however, Pergamenian coins continued in use at Sardes until the time of Augustus. For the whole period there are numerous coins of Sardes and of Ephesus.

[1] There are also a few Mohammedan coins, which will be published later.
[2] One of these is from the Basis deposit.

[1] Of these coins, 5 (Croesus, 1; Colophon, 4) are earlier than Period II.

[2] The coin of Aphrodisias is later than Period II.

Tables III and IV provide analyses of the two hoards of Greek coins, to which have been given the names of 'Basis-hoard' and 'Pot-hoard'. The latter, consisting of 60 tetradrachms (Alexander III, 30; Alabanda, 1; Perga, 2; Side, 13; Seleucid, 14) and one bronze coin of Aphrodisias, dating from Imperial times (no. 221), was found in a small vase, which unfortunately was broken beyond all hope of recognition during excavation by a careless workman. The presence of a bronze coin of a late date, and the fact that the hoard itself was found in connexion with a graveyard of the Byzantine period (though not in a grave), make it highly probable that the collection was formed during the early Middle Ages by a person of antiquarian tastes. 'Pot-hoard'.

Basis of Cult-Statue of Artemis after Excavation.

The coins[1] from the Basis of the cult-statue of Artemis were found, with one exception, in the vertical spaces between the stones forming the upper row of the structure as it existed when uncovered during the excavations. As will appear from the illustration, the silver coins were all found in one part of the Basis, while all the bronze coins came from another part of it. The exception above referred to, a coin of Croesus, was discovered in a horizontal 'Basis-hoard'.

[1] Silver = 56 (46 tetradrachms, 9 drachms, 1 coin of Croesus); bronze = 72; total = 128. Professor Butler, in his 'Second Report' (A. J. A., xv, 1911, p. 453), has inadvertently given the quantity found in the Basis as 'silver tetradrachms, to the number of fifty-four'.

position between the upper and lower rows of masonry. No coins whatever were found under the Basis, where excavation was carried on to a depth of several metres. The coins differ so widely in date, and many of the earlier ones are in such good preservation, that it is difficult to assume that they were all placed in the Basis at one and the same time.[1] The careful separation of metals shows, however, that they were deposited there intentionally.[2]

Imperial Period.

The Imperial period is represented by 83 Greek coins, as analysed in Table V. The great majority of these coins (61) were minted in Lydia, and one-half of the whole number is from Sardes. All but 2 (Cydonia and Alexandria) of this group of coins are from Sardes, and from cities with which the Sardians undoubtedly had commercial relations.

Thus it appears that when for reasons already given we deduct the 'Pot-hoard' coins (61) from the total number of Greek coins (419), the remaining 358 coins fall into two groups, the larger of which (241), or more than 67 per cent. of the whole, consists of coins struck either in Sardes or by kings in whose dominions the city happened to be at the time of striking.[1] Of the 117 which are left, 96 are from cities in Lydia and in contiguous parts of Asia Minor. Only 21 coins, therefore, out of a total of 358, come from farther afield; viz. Macedon (after Philip III), 17, and Cius in Bithynia, Ptolemy I, Cydonia in Crete, and Alexandria, 1 each.

While there are many instances, among the Greek coins, of variations in details from similar coins described elsewhere, they present but few new types; the most interesting of these are nos. 274 and 300, both of them struck at Sardes during the Imperial period.

ROMAN: Republican.

In considering the Roman coins from Sardes, we may dismiss the example of Republican date (no. 420) with the remark that it was certainly never in use in Sardes as a coin. It is interesting to note that of the 213 Imperial coins only 23, or nearly 10·8 per cent., belong to the period before the closing of the local mints during the reign of Gallienus, and that, furthermore, only 8 of these 23 are of bronze, the others being of silver.[4] It therefore appears that, so long as the quasi-autonomous coinage continued, only silver coins were in demand from Rome.

The greatest number of Roman coins (191) date from the two centuries following the closing of the local mints. For the period of 150 years between the final triumph of Constantine the Great over Licinius and the death of Leo I (A. D. 324–474) there are many more coins (148) than for the century and a half ending in A. D. 324.[5] It is therefore an attractive hypothesis—though in view of the comparatively small area at present excavated too much importance must not be attached to it—that during the third century the increasing

[1] In this analysis all silver coins bearing the name of Alexander have been included in the larger group. The fact that perhaps a majority of them were struck after his death would not affect the percentages much. The whole question of the date and places of striking of these coins is notoriously obscure; and some of the examples from Sardes may well have been issued by those of the Diadochi who included it in their kingdoms.

[2] Base. [3] Silver-washed.

[4] Four of these silver coins (nos. 422, 423, 428, 429) and two of the bronze coins (nos. 426, 427) were struck in the East.

importance of Christianity, by curtailing the numbers of the devotees at the shrine of Artemis, reduced the number of the coins which would be lost in its precinct. On the other hand, after the victory of Constantine had assured to the Christians not only toleration but even a virtual supremacy for their religion, they increased in temerity, and instead of shunning the temples of the gods, defiled them, or converted them to the uses of their own faith. The great increase of coins really begins with the accession of the sons of Constantine in A. D. 337; and it is to this time or soon after that may be assigned both the crosses and words of Christian significance scratched upon the door-jambs of the Temple of Artemis,[1] and the small chapel built against the south-east angle of the peristyle.[2]

'Church hoard'.

A small hoard, known as the 'Church-hoard', consisting of 25 bronze coins of this period, was found outside the chapel, and somewhat below the level of occupation of that time. It was composed as follows: Constantius II, 2; Valens, 1; Valentinian II, 8; Theodosius I, 9; Arcadius, 5; and it was probably deposited about A. D. 400.

The Imperial mints, so far as they can be ascertained, which are most largely represented, are those nearest Sardes, viz. Constantinople, Nicomedia, and Cyzicus.

BYZANTINE.

Of the 354 Byzantine coins, 216 were found in a tightly-packed mass under a large block of marble which had been removed from the cella wall and lay at the height of about one metre above the level of the pteroma. The coins had been contained in a bag, and the impression of its fabric could clearly be seen in the corrosion on many of them. Nearly all (203) of the coins forming this hoard are dated in the early years of the reign of Heraclius I (A. D. 610–41). The earliest coin in it was struck in the fifth year of Justin II (Nov. 15, A. D. 569–Nov. 14, A. D. 570), and the latest in the fifth year of Heraclius I (Oct. 5, A. D. 614–Oct. 4, A. D. 615). As there are but three of this latter date, it is probable that the deposit was made during A. D. 615, or early in the following year. Judging from the location of the hoard, it may be assumed to have been the savings of a labourer employed in quarrying stones from the abandoned shrine: in Professor Butler's volume on the Excavations, it will be shown that

TABLE VIII. ANALYSIS OF BYZANTINE HOARD.

The period of 199 years between the death of Constantine III (A.D. 668) and the accession of Basil I (A.D. 867) is, up to the present, represented by no coins whatsoever. This long hiatus seems to synchronize with a discontinuation of the work of destruction, when what remained of the cella was lined with concrete and used as a cistern.[1] By the same time the chapel had fallen into disuse, and the site had become unfrequented.

Among the new types of Byzantine coins discovered, the most important is a billon nomisma of the rebel Theodore Mankaphas, struck probably in Philadelphia at the end of the twelfth century. It is the only coin yet published, so far as I am aware, which may with certainty be attributed to him.[2] The attribution of nos. 973–84 to Theodore I of Nicaea cannot be regarded as certain; in no instance did the obverse inscription 'take' in the striking. The three new types with which he has been credited bear strong resemblances, however, both to each other and to coins previously assigned to this Emperor.

VANDAL LATIN.

The Vandal coin (no. 634) and the two Latin coins (nos. 989–90) require no comment beyond noting the fact that they are intruders.

MOHAMMEDAN.

There are 18 Mohammedan coins, which will be published later.

In concluding the analysis, we find that 86·8 per cent. of the coins from Sardes[3] were struck by the city or by its rulers[4]; that 10·4 per cent. were issued in contiguous parts of Asia Minor, and that only 2·7 per cent. arrived there from what may be termed unrelated territory.

There is a small group of coins, the majority of which, being illegible, are necessarily omitted from the Catalogue, which were found in unusual connexions. Each was discovered in a cup or bowl, together with, in every case, broken egg-shells and the remains of a bronze spoon or spatula. These cups were for the most part (cf. nos. 208, 228) found in the same general part of the excavations, to the west of the north side of the temple.[5] The fact that only three of the coins proved to be legible makes it difficult to generalize about them; but in every case they were of bronze; none, so far as could be determined, were from the Roman Imperial mints; the cups and bowls containing them seem all to have been made in Imperial times (though coin no. 242 dates from before 133 B.C.). It is to be hoped that more of these egg-cups, containing coins in better preservation, will be forthcoming, so that more inferences may be drawn as to their meaning and use.

[1] For a fuller description, cf. H. C. Butler, 'Second Preliminary Report on the American Excavations at Sardes in Asia Minor' (A.J.A., xv, 1911, p. 450).

[2] Cf. the note to this coin (no. 964).

[3] Excluding the 61 coins of the Pot-hoard.

[4] Including all the coins bearing the name of Alexander; the exclusion of these would lower the first percentage only slightly, without affecting the general result.

[5] No. 242 was found in quite a different part of the excavations.

To the descriptions in the Catalogue are appended data giving, by means of 'squares' and 'levels', the exact finding-place, as well as the date of discovery, of each coin from the main excavations.[1] For coins found in tombs, the number of the tomb is given. The levels and squares are determined according to a system which will be fully explained in Professor Butler's volume on the Excavations. For the present, it is sufficient to say that the levels are computed upwards from a fixed point in the bed of the Pactolus far below the deepest point which the excavations are likely ever to reach.

In order that the various coins comprising any one of the four hoards may be readily distinguished from the other coins, their squares, levels, and dates have not been printed in the Catalogue. These coins have appended to them the following abbreviations:

B.–H. = Basis-Hoard.
P.–H. = Pot-Hoard.
Ch.–H. = Church-Hoard.
Byz. H. = Byzantine Hoard.

The levels, squares, and dates of the hoards are as follows:

	Level.	Square.	Date.
B.–H.	99·8[2]	Æ 689–90 Æ 669–89	June, 1911
P.–H.	99·8	II.531	Feb. 26, 1913
Ch.–H.	102·0	1076	April 18, 1913
Byz. H.	100·0	806	April 11, 1912.

Some of the abbreviations used for the tombs need explanation. Pl.-T. A is a tomb in the plain, not far from the railway, in which was found a sarcophagus of the Sidamara type. S. and SW. (followed by a number) indicate tombs in either the South or the South-West Necropolis, situated respectively east and west of the Pactolus, some distance above the Artemision. Tum. I refers to coins found loose in a small tumulus about half a mile due north of the temple; when followed by a Greek lower-case letter, a particular burial in the tumulus is meant. Bastion indicates coins found among some houses on the lower part of the First Tomb-Slope, forming part of the principal necropolis, facing the Temple of Artemis across the Pactolus.

In describing the coins, the forms used in the volumes of the various British Museum Catalogues have, in general, been followed. The position of inscriptions has in every case been noted, unless they read 'from l., upwards', i. e. in the usual modern fashion.

The numbers in the Indices (as well as on the Plates) refer to the numbers of the coins in their order in the Catalogue; and the practice has been adopted of printing references to obverses in heavy type.

[1] Owing to an unfortunate oversight, the find-data of several coins were left behind in Sardes at the close of the season of 1914. As the Expedition will not resume work until the present war is over, this volume must go to press without them. They will be supplied in the next publication of Sardes coins. The finding-places of a few of the coins are not known, and cannot be ascertained. In all such cases question-marks (?) are printed in the 'level' and 'square' columns.

[2] Croesean coin: level = 99·4; square = 669.

I wish to express my gratitude to all those who have helped me in my work of compiling this Catalogue. To Professor Chase, of Harvard, and to Mr. G. F. Sir William M. Ramsay, Professor Butler, and Mr. W. H. Buckler have all generously contributed their help on the numerous occasions in which I have asked for it.

NOTE ON THE PLATES

It has been impossible to illustrate this volume as fully as had been intended. The silver coins from the Basis were last seen by the writer in June 1912, when he deposited them in the Imperial Museum at Constantinople. Since then he has repeatedly attempted to obtain them for further study and for taking casts; but each time he has been informed that they have been mislaid and cannot be found.

It is greatly to be hoped that when the time comes to publish more coins from Sardes the missing pieces will be forthcoming, so that it may be possible to include some plates illustrating many of the coins of Alexander and of the Seleucids described in the following pages.

ADDITIONAL NOTE TO COIN No. 274.

I had originally described the figure on the rev. of this coin as Mên, owing to what I believed was a crescent behind his shoulders. I am now, however, of the opinion that the description given in the text is the correct one. My thanks are due to Mr. A. B. Cook, to whom I wrote, enclosing a photograph of the coin, after reading his important and illuminating note in Zeus (vol. i, p. 681, note 4), in which θοραῖος is connected with the element -θυρ- in διθύραμβος. The author, after referring to the change in northern Greek dialects of ο to υ, continues (loc. cit.): 'If on the confines of Makedonia, Epeiros, and Thessaly Δειπάτυρος denoted "Zeus the Father", it is allowable to suppose that in the same region Δείθυρος* denoted "Zeus the Begetter" (θορός, θορή, θόρνυμαι, θρώσκω, etc.). Thus διθύραμβος could mean what in substance I believe it to have been "the song of Zeus the Begetter".'

Mr. Cook, in a letter dated September 28, 1915, writes of this coin: 'Mên has none of his usual attributes . . . except the sceptre and phiále, and even these seem to me doubtful. Frankly, I should regard the figure as Dionysiac—probably Dionysos himself. . . .' And further on: 'This of course would suit your reading CAPΔIANΩN [Θ]OPAIOC admirably; and I only hope you are right—it would be a most desirable confirmation of my guess with regard to διθύραμβος. But, alas, a coin of Sardeis purchased by the Cabinet des médailles at Paris in 1897 from W. H. Waddington [here follows a reference to Inv. Wadd., no. 5219] reads ΔIONYCOC KOPAIOC.'

There can, I feel certain, be no doubt as to the reading ΘOPAIOC. There are distinct traces on the coin of the lower part of a θ (not visible in the photograph), thus precluding the possibility of KOPAIOC and putting the reading ΘOPAIOC beyond reasonable doubt.

None of Tiberius' other coins with the 'Imperial' obv. have earlier dates than year 4—the year he became Augustus. This coin might seem to refute Wroth's careful study of the dates on the coins of this reign (B. M. Cat., p. 125 f., and foot-notes in the text). However, '2' may be a die-cutter's error. I am unable to reconcile AVI (= AVC) with the date. 664. No coins of year 6 of this type in B. M. Cat.; see Tolstoï, p. 524, no. 83 (off. B). 665. Cf. preceding note; see Tolstoï, p. 527, no. 103. 666. B. M. Cat., no. 130 (B for B). 667. Ib., no. 141 (no off. mark). 668. In B. M. Cat. (no. 159) and Tolstoï (p. 535, no. 154) the figures of the year 18 are differently arranged; both are of off. B.

This is the first published coin which may with certainty be attributed to the pretender Theodore Ducas Mankaphas (see Thomsen, Cat., no. 809, Pl. i, for silver nomisma with very uncertain inscr. attributed to Mankaphas [obv., Emperor crowned by Virgin; rev., Bust of Virgin]; Borrell, Cat., lot 1106 [obv., Emperor and St. Theodore holding patriarchal cross; rev., Virgin seated holding infant Christ] = B. M. Cat., Vandals, p. 207 f., nos. 4–9 [see note 1 to same page]). In B. M. Cat., Vandals, p. 195 f., a bronze coin is described, which bears on its rev. the inscr. +ΘЄ|ΟΔΩΡΟC|ΔЄCΠΟT|HCΟΔΟV|KAC. Wroth, in discussing his attribution of it to Theodore I of Thessalonica (p. 196), remarks justly upon the fact that the type of the coin (obv., cross crosslet on steps between two busts; rev., 5-line inscr.) is characteristic rather of the eleventh and twelfth centuries than of the thirteenth, and intimates that he would have been willing to attribute it to Mankaphas, were it not that 'we have no reason to suppose that he assumed the surname Ducas which figures on our coins'. We now have proof that he did; and the British Museum specimens may properly be assigned to this little-known pretender.

972. Cf. B. M. Cat., Vandals, nos. 4–11 (throne without back); in the specimen described above the back is clearly visible. 973–80. Not in B. M. Cat., Vandals. The complete illegibility of the inscr. is unfortunate; but the workmanship and style point to Nicaea, and the bearded military saint is certainly St. Theodore. I venture to suggest that, when coin-inscriptions are obscure, the presence of a beard on a military saint be taken as evidence that St. Theodore is intended, and not St. Demetrius; on this ground I should assign the bronze nomisma described in B. M. Cat., Vandals, p. 194, no. 3, to Theodore I of Nicaea, as does Sabatier.
